

Pennsylvania Orders 'Full Speed Ahead' On Flood Controls In Stroudsburg Area

Suez Canal Conference Peaceful

CAIRO, Sept. 4 (AP)—President Nasser and the five-nation mission from the London conference discussed Suez Canal control for an hour and 45 minutes tonight without running into any barriers on a compromise.

A source close to the mission said the sessions now have entered a discussion of differences "in a very good atmosphere" indicating Nasser has not slammed the door on the possibility of a peaceful settlement.

Robert G. Menzies, Australian prime minister and chairman of the mission, came out of the meeting in good humor. He said "We have not begun to attack each other yet."

An informant disclosed that Nasser spoke for "quite some time." Then the others entered into the discussion.

He declined to give any specific points Nasser made in outlining Egypt's position.

Both Sides

But Menzies said "both sides have now presented their points of view. Tonight both sides began the clarification and discussion of various points of difference. That is the discussion which will be continued tomorrow."

The mission's fourth meeting with Nasser was set for 7 p.m. (U. S. M. EDT) Wednesday.

Menzies acknowledged to reporters that there was still quite a bit more discussion to come.

In previous sessions, Menzies had done most or all of the talking in explaining the U.S. proposals, backed by 18 countries at the London Suez Conference last month, for international control of the canal with Egypt as a member of the proposed international board.

Secretary of State Dulles drafted the plan.

In previous statements, Nasser has called the Dulles plan unacceptable and termed international control "collective colonialism."

Egyptian sources predicted before tonight's session that Nasser would avoid setting up a block to further negotiations. They said he planned to state his views on Egyptian sovereignty, Egypt's right to nationalize the waterway, and Egypt's willingness to guarantee to keep the canal open to all.

Nasser went to tonight's meeting almost directly from a 3½-hour closed door conference with Gen. Abdel Hakim Amer, his close friend and commander in chief of Egypt's armed forces.

There was no disclosure what they talked about.

But Nasser and Egyptians generally have made no secret of their concern over a British-French show of force within striking distance of the Suez Canal.

Scotland Yard Drops Charge Against Russian

LONDON, Sept. 4 (AP)—Scotland Yard dropped its hunt today for Nine Pomorava, Soviet woman champion discus thrower. There was growing speculation that it was another step in letting her beat the rap on a charge of stealing five cheap hats.

Nina was safe in the diplomatic territory of the Soviet Embassy where British law officers may not penetrate.

Problem

But there was the problem of what would happen to her when she left the embassy in an attempt to get back home.

The case ballooned quickly into an international incident and some of the British press said that pressing the theft charge and the search for Nina constituted a major political blunder.

British Columnist Reports Marilyn May Be Expecting

LONDON, Wednesday, Sept. 5 (AP)—The tabloid Daily Sketch said today actress Marilyn Monroe has consulted a gynecologist and may be expecting a baby.

Miss Monroe, wife of playwright Arthur Miller, has been absent for four days from the set of the movie "The Sleeping Prince" she is making with Sir Laurence Olivier.

Governor Discusses Problems

By Leonard Randolph

IT WAS a windless, hazy afternoon but the tall, bespectacled man on the narrow, rough-wood platform tilted his body forward a little, as tall men do, almost as though he were leaning against the wind.

George Leader, governor of the greater commonwealth of Pennsylvania, head of the Democratic party in one of the most powerful states in the union and main "speaker" for the day, was about to break the first ground on a $54,750 Wallenpaupack Creek project which may, eventually, keep Dreher township and Green township houses dry during drenching rainstorms for the first time in decades.

As a governor he filled the bill smartly and completely in the new mode of the heads of American states. He was neatly dressed. He had a broad, friendly grin. His voice was a little rough but his language was the language of a man who has spent part of his life in classrooms.

As a politician he is something out of the new era in American politics. He shakes hands like an old pro, remembers names and faces like the mayor of a small town running for reelection. He does just about everything right.

Investigators Seek New Clues In Kidnapping

HAMDEN, Conn., Sept. 4 (AP)—Investigators tonight sought new clues in the kidnapping of six-week-old Cynthia Ruotolo from her carriage in the foyer of a crowded department store here Saturday.

State Atty. Abraham S. Ullman told a newsman "we have absolutely nothing" to go on, after agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, state and local police in three days of intensive work had checked out and discarded literally scores of tips from all parts of Connecticut.

A woman, described by police as a former mental patient, was picked up last night for questioning but quickly released.

Blows Up

One tip which had the faint possibility of proving useful blew up when the person who had made a series of telephone calls to a radio announcer professing to know something about the baby was found to be a 13-year-old girl "seeking a morbid thrill."

Since the FBI stepped in Sunday, representatives of all agencies have used a common room in the Hamden police headquarters for around the clock conferences.

Cynthia's mother was shopping with a neighbor when the blue-eyed baby was kidnapped. The child's father, Stephen, an $80-a-week paint salesman, was in his modest home here taking care of his other two children.

From a composite description given by a half dozen or more shoppers and passersby, police say, they picture Cynthia's abductor as a small, stocky woman with a dark complexion.

Bess Myerson Enters Court

NEW YORK, Sept. 4 (AP)—Miss America of 1945 fought in court today to keep her 9-year-old daughter, charging her husband had threatened to "do away with himself" and the little girl.

Her husband, doll firm executive Allan Wayne, has charged that the former Bess Myerson who won the Atlantic City beauty contest 12 years ago had "spirited away" their daughter Barbara from his apartment.

gynecologist to visit her yesterday at her rented country home at Englefield Green, Surrey.

"He arrived before lunch," Ward quoted a member of the Monroe entourage, "and stayed for about three quarters of an hour."

"Afterwards she was on the telephone to America—speaking, I believe, to Arthur Miller, her husband."

"She seemed bright and cheerful."

Miller flew back to London today after a brief visit in the United States.

for the old school politician—except may talk and act like one.

New Trend

A part of the new trend in politics could be seen on the platform with George Leader in the person of a man named Maurice Goddard. In form and visage Goddard bears a close resemblance to his boss; his studious face often seems to be contemplating a problem of office when it is caught in a momentary repose. Goddard is a "career" man, a "professional" forest and waters expert recruited from a college in which he was widely respected.

And George Leader seized upon the opportunity yesterday afternoon at Newfoundland to tell the people that he hoped to see the day when government would be managed by the men who knew what they were doing in their specific jobs. In another time—20 to 40 years ago—he said, the operation of government was not nearly so complex. But today we've arrived at the point where we must have more highly-skilled technical people in the right positions, he went on.

It was not an easy thing to do, he said, getting good men and women to come into government jobs. The pay was poor. And there was a general feeling that government jobs were political handouts and nothing more. You had to overcome those taboos and break down the prejudices. It hadn't been easy and there was still a great need for experts in flood control, engineering, mental health or medicine.

There was no political tremor in the way George Leader said it. It was a non-partisan analysis. It was almost like listening to a doctor diagnose a case of hives or sore throat. It was matter-of-fact and singularly unemotional. He was talking about a symptom of something which "good government" forces look upon as a chronic disease.

Then, abruptly, he broke away from the problems of government to the problems of the men and women who stood behind the roped-off area to hear him. He had said earlier that the problems were the same, that government was, simply stated, the welfare of the people. Now, he said, "We're not here to lecture you. We're here to see the beginning of something you and I want to see accomplished. That's what I'm interested in—a positive, constructive approach to government."

Non-Political

For the Governor of Pennsylvania it was the end of a non-political day. He had started it early in the morning at Avoca air port, visiting flood projects in Dickinson City, Olyphant and moving down the line through Bartonsville to Shawnee Inn.

At Shawnee he got out of his car in front of the red-carpeted steps a few minutes after a uniformed attendant had hurriedly swept away the red lint and dust which collects on the stoop of all official gatherings.

He was barely halfway up the first step when he was officially greeted by the burgess of Stroudsburg, Hal H. Harris. The others who made up the official welcoming party waited in a semi-circle at the head of the steps.

George Leader shook hands with most of them on the way by. He gripped the hand of Rep. Van D. Yetter and shook it with a broad grin and said "Hello, Van. How are you? Nice to see you here." There was more handshaking. Then the Governor was hustled through the door, down the long, cool hallway to the rooms The Inn had reserved for him and his official party.

A quarter of an hour later the Country Club room was opened and it filled up a short time later. The Governor sat down to lunch at 1:30 in a part of the club rooms.

There were separate but equal facilities for reporters out on the gracious terrace of The Inn along with the ladies of the golf course.

At a point approximately on schedule, the press conference began. Sitting in a low, comfortable chair, George Leader started it off in his usual friendly fashion. He was the image of the good host, breaking the ice for invited guests.

He introduced Goddard and Gen. George Richards. In between comments from these two men he sandwiched his own remarks. They were always pertinent to the subject, and even when he criticized people who he felt were trying to thwart a good highway plan, his voice was unheated.

Newfoundland

When the conference was over, the party left for Newfoundland. As they disappeared out the downstairs doors of The Inn, one young local politician muttered that he didn't see why they had to appoint so damned many Republicans.

George Leader didn't hear him say it. But it's a comment he could probably hear many times in Pennsylvania today.

It comes from men who have learned politics in the fashion of McGuffey's readers and the one-room school of patronage. They can hear the voices of the past so clearly and so strongly that they haven't realized that George Leader is a part of the political future of their party.

George is already around the corner. Some of the "old pros" are walking along with him—men like James Finnegan, for instance. In his speeches and his own rationalization of his actions, George Leader has become a part of the permanent change which makes American politics a living, dynamic thing.

In Pennsylvania's Democratic party, somebody had to do it sooner or later. It is a part of George Leader's abstract vision of the future that he is that man.

Different Aspects Mark Racial Strife

By The Associated Press

A NATIONAL Guard adjutant general Tuesday predicted an early end to racial strife over public school integration in Clinton, Tenn., but in Mansfield, Tex., the threat of violence maintained racial barriers despite a court order for the high school to integrate.

There were a few other potential trouble spots, too, as schools in the South began their fall terms. In many other cases integration of white and Negro students in the same classrooms proceeded without incident.

Tennessee Adjutant General Joe Henry said the situation is "well in hand" at Clinton, where nine of the 12 eligible Negroes attended Clinton High School under protection of National Guard bayonets and a federal court injunction.

Only 257 white children, along with the nine Negroes out of the enrollment of 806, attended classes at Clinton. There were no demonstrations but National Guardsmen, sent in Saturday night to quell anti-integration riots, remained on the alert.

First Time

For the first time since the school opened on an integrated basis eight days ago, the Negro pupils walked to their nearby homes on Foley Hill when classes ended for the day. They previously had been taken home in cars. Pickets were gone by the time school was dismissed.

Henry said orders banning mass meetings and public speaking would be continued. He said road blocks would be maintained to keep all but "persons with bona fide reasons" from entering Clinton.

In Knoxville, federal Judge Robert L. Taylor issued an injunction forbidding Anderson County citizens or anyone who may come into the county from interfering with peaceful integration of the Clinton High School.

Eighty of the guardsmen in Clinton were hurried to nearby Oliver Springs Monday night to quell a riot stemming from reports that schools would be integrated. One member of the mob was wounded when two Negroes sprang from a car, opened fire and then fled. Two Negroes, identified as William Capshaw, 31, and L. D. Spraggins, 40, both of nearby Oak Ridge, were arrested on charges of felonious assault. In addition, 15 white members of the mob were arrested on breach of the peace charges.

In Mansfield, a Texas Ranger rescued a young Episcopal priest from an angry pro-segregation crowd at the high school.

Third Airman's Body Found

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4 (AP)—Red China has reported finding a third body—tentatively identified as William F. Haskins of Westport, Conn.—from the U. S. Navy patrol plane shot down off China Aug. 23.

The State Department announced today the body, along with personal effects, is being turned over by the Communists to British diplomats at Shanghai.

State Plans To Advance Without Federal Aid

COMMONWEALTH OFFICIALS have ordered "full speed ahead" on plans for permanent flood control installations in and near Stroudsburg.

Gov. George M. Leader said yesterday that the State does not intend to wait for Federal participation in construction of dikes and levees on Brodheads, McMichaels or Pocono Creeks. Dr. Maurice K. Goddard, secretary of forests and waters, told reporters that his department wants to get local flood control work done as soon as possible. He said forests and waters engineers had already done the topographical work on surveys in this area and turned results over to the Army Corps of Engineers.

Goddard expressed confidence the Corps of Engineers will be able to justify Federal participation in flood control projects for Stroudsburg. But he emphasized that this did not mean the State would have to wait until Federal funds were made available.

The State will be able to claim reimbursement from the Corps for part of the money spent on such a project, he said, providing it is done within the next couple of years.

Within Year

Goddard said his department hopes to get the local project started within a year. Design for the project is being done by the Philadelphia firm of Friday, Gaulker, Truscott and Friday. He estimated the cost of the local project at $1,750,000.

At the same time Goddard said that the Stroudsburg project is the only one being considered for reimbursement application from the Corps. Similar work to be done at Newfoundland and other regional sites will be financed solely by the Commonwealth, he said.

Eisenhower To Feature 'Pep Rally'

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4 (AP)—President Eisenhower will open his re-election campaign formally at a personal invitation "pep rally" for about 500 key campaign workers Sept. 12 at his Gettysburg, Pa., farm.

Announcement of the kickoff date was made today by press secretary James C. Hagerty after two days of GOP strategy conferences in the White House.

The date the Republicans picked to get the second-term election ball rolling is just one day before Adlai Stevenson, the Democratic presidential nominee, is scheduled to make a major speech at Harrisburg, Pa.

Stevenson's words will be carried by TV and radio. Hagerty told newsmen it would not be correct to class the President's Gettysburg speech as a major address.

Lawmaker Leaves Jail

DANBURY, Conn., Sept. 4 (AP)—Rep. Thomas J. Lane (D-Mass.) was released from the federal correctional institution here today after completing a four-month jail sentence for income tax evasion.

Vice President On Hand As Father Dies

WHITTIER, Calif., Sept. 4 (AP)—After fighting for his life for 13 days, Frank A. Nixon, 77, died quietly at his home as his family silently stood by at 8:25 p.m. tonight. Vice President Richard Nixon, his son, had been summoned from a friend's home, a half hour before.

Mrs. Hannah Nixon, 71, held her husband's hand until the last.

Funeral services already had been arranged—by Frank Nixon himself.

"He arranged his own funeral services Saturday," said Dr. I. N. Kraushaar, his physician.

Local Thruway 'Under Design'

A TOP HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT official in Gov. George Leader's administration said yesterday that design engineering for the Stroudsburg Thruway may be completed in "early Spring."

Gen. George Richards, deputy secretary of highways, told reporters that location for the Thruway has been approved by both the State Highway Department and the Federal Government and is "now under design."

Child Strangles Escaping From Rats

CHICAGO, Sept. 4 (AP)—Police said a 1-year-old girl found dead in her crib today apparently had strangled herself in an effort to escape from rats.

They said her head was wedged between the bars of the crib and the mattress. Her body was covered with rat bites.

A brother and sister, who slept in another bed in the same room, were unhurt.

Found

Sharon Jane Ivey's body was found by her father, Edward, 35, a factory worker, on his return from a trip to Madison, Ala. He told police he went to Madison to pick up his two sons who spent the summer at his father's farm.

Ivey said he stopped at Pulaski, Tenn., to visit his wife's family and found his mother-in-law ill at a hospital. He telephoned his wife, Susie Mae, 26, in Chicago but she said she would stay with the children and not go to Pulaski. Ivey left the boys in Pulaski and continued to Chicago.

On his arrival, he told police, he learned his wife had changed her plans, left the children in the care of neighbors and gone to Pulaski.

Police said the children were left in the care of Henry Ransom, 40. Ransom said he cared for the children Sunday night, but yesterday left them with Sally Baker, 11.

The girl said she stayed with the children until she developed an earache. During her stay, she said, she killed one rat in the basement flat.

Stevenson Heads West

ABOARD STEVENSON PLANE EN ROUTE TO LOS ANGELES, Sept. 4 (AP)—Adlai E. Stevenson winged westward tonight on another fast-paced campaign jaunt.

Stevenson, who left Vancouver, Wash., only a week ago today, headed back for the West Coast on a political expedition that will span the nation in the next five days.

He and his vice-presidential running mate, Estes Kefauver of Tennessee, left Chicago by chartered plane.

Immediately ahead is a Stevenson speech tomorrow to the American Legion Convention, meeting in Los Angeles Shrine Auditorium. That offers a natural forum for Stevenson to open up on national defense, foreign and atomic policy and veterans affairs.

Shortway Plans Enroute To Washington

Gen. Richards said also that of, ficial presentation of plans for the Shortway is now on the way to Washington. He noted that early in June this year a preliminary report was given to Sec. of Commerce Weeks. At that time the State asked for approval of the Shortway.

The Federal government asked for more "details," Richards said. It is the "details" which are now completed and en route to Weeks again, he went on.

The deputy secretary called Route 6 a "fine primary system" for travel and pointed out that this route, with connecting links, would serve The Stroudsburgs, Scranton, Wilkes-Barre and points westward to Sharon.

Route 6 would be advantageous basically because it would not be a "limited access" highway, he went on. This would mean that all points along the route would be reasonably accessible to the highway.

Hand In Hand

Gov. Leader pointed out emphatically that long-range highway planning for the area goes hand in hand with industrial planning and with the provision of a more stable economy in Northeastern-Northern State regions.

He said, also, that such planning would generally be split into three aspects—Route 6, which would have to be constructed and located as a primary highway across the entire region; the Shortway, which would serve as the connecting link from the Poconos westward; and improved highways (such as the Stroudsburg Thruway) running north and south and connecting the major arteries into a network of highways.

"We've got tremendous areas in Northern Pennsylvania which are remote," he continued. "This is ridiculous when (we are) at a period in American history when industry is being decentralized."

Richards told reporters that $17 million had been allocated for highways in Monroe County alone. Of this total he said that $3,700,000 had been set aside for permanent construction on flood-damaged highways. Under construction to date, he said, is an estimated $2,400,000 of that work.

The highways official said "we would like to see it progressing faster" but weather conditions and the one-month steel strike slowed some work down in the area. He said the department feels that it "won't be too long before temporary bridges will be replaced with permanent structures."

Richards said that he was happy to discover that the resort season in the Poconos had been better than preliminary estimates had shown. He said there had apparently been an influx of "weekend visitors" which had helped offset some of the loss of business due to bad psychological effects from the 1955 flood.

Pravda Praises British Book

MOSCOW, Sept. 4 (AP)—Pravda's literary reviewer says the "The Quiet American" by the British novelist Graham Greene was an "outstanding literary event." The novel, telling the story of an American economic adviser in Viet Nam, has been criticized in the United States for presenting its chief character unsympathetically.

Pravda says the novel shows an honest person cannot reconcile himself "with public injustice and military aggression."

OFF MIKE

by Joe Whalen

In this space last week we pointed out that WVPO salesmen are kept busy merely by covering the area our signal embraces. Today, a little about that coverage.

Radio and television expands are usually recorded in primary and secondary filings. This means, simply, that a station's primary area is that section where the station can be heard clearly at all times, while secondary coverage embraces an area where a station can be heard clearly most of the time but may be hampered now and then by another station's signal.

WVPO's primary coverage is a radius of approximately 30 miles. It extends as far west as Palmerston and Kresgeville; as far north as Canadensis and Tobyhanna; as far east as Bushkill and Blainetown, N.J., and as far south as Nazareth and Phillipsburg, N.J. Secondary coverage expands to a radius of 50 miles and, in some cases, further. Under secondary conditions, the Voice of the Poconos can be heard in Mauch Chunk and Dingman's Ferry, in Quakertown and in Frenchtown, N. J. A recent survey shows that the primary area is populated by more than 110,000 people while both combined, i.e., primary and secondary, shows a population approaching 400,000.

These figures, naturally, represent a potential listening audience. For obvious reasons we can never feel that we have even half of the above numbers as listeners, except in extreme circumstances (during last year's flood, for instance, it was estimated we had 75 per cent of our primary audi-

Car, Truck Sideswipe On Route 611

SOME $200 damage was caused yesterday afternoon when a car sideswiped a truck on Route 611, three miles north of Stroudsburg.

Stroudsburg State Police identified the drivers involved as Malcolm E. Barnhart, 29, of Pittston, and Charles M. Titman, 65, of Mount Bethel, RD 1. Neither was injured.

Troopers said both motorists were traveling south on Route 611 about 4:50 p. m., when Titman slowed down his truck in preparation to making a left turn. As he was doing so, Barnhart's 1955 sedan sideswiped the left side of the truck, State Police said.

East Stroudsburg Council Adopts Moving Ordinance

Permit To Be Necessary In Future

EAST STROUDSBURG residents will now find it difficult to move if their personal property taxes haven't been paid.

Borough Council last night adopted an ordinance designed to curb people moving from the borough with outstanding obligations to the municipality, county or school district.

Under the terms of the ordinance, residents planning to move must first obtain a permit from the tax collector to move "personal property in bulk."

The ordinance directs that every person, firm or corporation must file an application with the tax collector for permission to move property from its premises. The party must attach receipted tax bills to the application, in addition to other information.

Collector

The collector will then issue the permit "if . . . there are no outstanding obligations due the borough, county or school district," the ordinance provides.

Moreover, the measure makes it unlawful for anyone to transport or remove personal property of another person unless the moving permit has been obtained.

The ordinance provides for a fine up to $50 for any violations of its provisions.

Borough Solicitor Charles Bensing also presented a new fire prevention ordinance, which was quickly adopted by council.

The new measure combines features of several earlier ordinances. It is the result of about a year-and-a-half's work by members of council's fire committee and the Fire Department.

In other action, council awarded a new two-year contract to Howard Linger of Stroudsburg RD 2, to collect borough garbage for $17,984.

Council received one other bid for the contract. J. F. Frailey submitted a figure of $22,891. Council permitted a third party to withdraw its bid.

After being awarded the new contract, Linger noted that it called for collection of garbage under "terms of the ordinance."

Reminder

In many instances, Linger said, residents are not leaving out their garbage under those terms.

Therefore, council reminded residents that garbage, refuse, and ashes should each be in separate containers. Council warned that it will endeavor to bring about stricter enforcement of the ordinance, which provides for a $5 fine for any violations of the measure's provisions.

Linger will meet next Tuesday with members of council's ordinance committee and the board of health to go over the problem of garbage collection in the borough.

Planning Commission chairman Ralph Burrows appeared at last night's meeting and reported that the borough recreation board plans to rededicate the community's rehabilitation playground, at exercises to begin at 2:30 p.m., Sunday, Sept. 16.

Organizations which have contributed to the rebuilding of the flood-battered playground will be invited to send two representatives to the event. A plaque commemorating the rehabilitation of the facility will be presented to the council president, Burrows reported.

The police report showed there were 28 motor vehicle violations, and three penal violations, in the borough last month. These offenses resulted in a total $165 in fines being paid to the municipality.

The treasurer's report showed the borough also collected $1,395.25 in parking meter receipts last month.

Council also voted to remind residents that it is a violation of an ordinance to discharge firearms within the borough.

Depot Jury On Vacation For One Day

SCRANTON, Pa., Sept. 4 (AP)—A federal grand jury investigating construction of the $3 million dollar Army Signal Corps Depot at Tobyhanna did not resume today as scheduled. U. S. atty. J. Julius Levy said the delay was caused by the absence of a witness whom he did not identify.

Levy said he understood the witness was ill. He said the grand jury would resume tomorrow, with three Philadelphians scheduled to testify. He identified them as accountants and a representative of an insurance firm.

Subpoena

In Philadelphia, William D. Teely, an assistant to Matthew H. McCloskey, national chairman of the Democratic Finance Committee, was subpoenaed to appear before the grand jury tomorrow.

The subpoena was served by a representative of the U. S. Marshall's office.

"I don't know a thing about this," Teely said. "It's all Greek to me. But I'll gladly go up to talk to them."

Teely, an automobile dealer, was treasurer of the Pennsylvania delegation to the Democratic National Convention at Chicago.

Special Treat Available For Blood Donors

DO YOU want to take a ride in the 40 and 8's locomotive?

You can do so Friday under an arrangement announced last night by George N. Post, American Legion.

Members of the post have assumed the responsibility for obtaining 125 pints of blood—Monroe County's monthly quota in the Red Cross Blood Program—when the Bloodmobile pays its September visit here Friday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Anyone in Stroudsburg or East Stroudsburg who agrees to donate a pint of blood will be eligible for transportation to and from his or her home in the 40 and 8 miniature locomotive, which makes a hit in all the parades and functions in which it appears.

Registration

Earl Palmer, chairman of the Legion committee on blood donations, said last night that anyone willing to give blood and wishing a ride in the locomotive may leave his or her name at the Legion Home (telephone 1190) or the Red Cross Office (357) today, Thursday or Friday.

To date, the Legion committee has received pledge cards from 30 prospective blood donors. More than four times that number are needed, Palmer emphasized, in order to meet the county's quota.

Working with him on the committee are Ted Janusz, Elmer Heffer, Louis Caretta, William Morohovich and Donald Gage.

LeRoy Mikeis, Red Cross blood chairman, noted the county was unable to meet its 125-pint quota in July and August, first two months of the new fiscal year. Its credit with the blood bank is based on the amount of blood collected. In August, for example, General Hospital was restricted to a draw of 87 pints from the regional blood bank and was forced to find donors of eight pints after the Red Cross supply was exhausted.

Jewish New Year Begins At Sundown Today; Services Set

RABBI YEHUDAH E. PERKIN, new spiritual leader of Temple Israel, East Stroudsburg, began his official duties last Friday and conducted his first service Saturday midnight.

The service, known as Slichos, ushered in Rosh Hashonah, the 10-day period of self repentance and forgiveness in which prayers will be offered for all humanity.

Rosh Hashonah, or the Jewish New Year, begins at sunset tonight and extends until Friday night, Sept. 14, which is Yom Kippur, or the Day of Atonement.

Rabbi Perkin will conduct Rosh Hashonah services in Temple Israel tomorrow at 8 a. m. and 7 p. m. and Friday at 8 a. m. and 8 p. m.

Significant

The festival of Rosh Hashonah, the rabbi explained, is of significance not only to Jewish people since its historical background appeals to all humanity. According to tradition, it is the birthday of the world.

Adam was created on Rosh Hashonah and was judged on that date, Rabbi Perkin said, adding, "As Adam was created on New Year's without a past, too, do we look forward for a beginning of a New Year to do good to our fellow man with great humility, hope and sympathy."

The entire spirit of Rosh Hashonah is permeated with solemnity and reverence; it is an occasion for sober reflection and soul searching, the Jewish leader said.

"During this solemn period we seek spiritual enrichment and cultural uplifting of the entire community. We pray that all nations form one fellowship to serve God with a perfect heart. The attitude of the Jew to the non-Jew is that our Father in Heaven is a universal God who looks down upon all the sons of Man and demands that all His children shall dwell together in peace and in safety."

"The Jewish scriptures begin with the story of Man, not with the history of the Jew. His God is the sovereign of the Universe, his faith for the day on which God will be one, and His name will be one."

Monday Holidays Would Benefit Worker And Businesses That Serve Vacationers

A three-day holiday such as the recent Labor Day weekend is beneficial to both the vacation-minded wage earner and the business that caters to vacation trade.

The calendar played a mean trick on both groups this year by having two of the biggest holidays—Memorial Day and July Fourth—fall in the middle of the week.

One-day holidays provide few recreational opportunities for the tired businessman or busy factory or office worker. The time is too short to take his family to the mountains or seashore or to the home of relatives for a visit.

Mid-week holidays disrupt business without contributing something in return. Wage earners who would like to get away from the routine of everyday life are compelled, instead, to stay at home. Resorts with facilities geared to accommodate large crowds must be content with little more than a normal number of guests.

Plaster Institute Proves Thin Skinned; Objects To Use Of Term For Drunks

With a degree of touchiness seldom encountered in the male American adult, the Arizona Lath and Plaster Institute has cried out for speakers of the language to cease and desist in the use of "plastered" as a synonym for "inebriated."

"Linking our trade with overindulgence," says the Institute elegantly and by resolution, "detracts from the dignity of a respectable industry."

Most respectfully, we remind the quivering members of the Institute that all our life we have heard it said that this or that toss-pot is stewed, boiled or fried, but never

A movement is under way in New Jersey to change the date of certain of our holidays so they always fall on Mondays. A bill to that effect has passed the Assembly and is awaiting action in the Senate. It would be inoperative, however, unless similar bills were adopted by Pennsylvania, New York and Delaware.

As one advocate of the change put it, there is no reason one can think of, except the iron whim of custom, why Lincoln's and Washington's birthdays, Memorial Day, July Fourth, Columbus Day and Veterans' Day should not be observed on Mondays. This, with Labor Day, would give seven three-day weekends a year.

We suggest to Gov. George M. Leader and the General Assembly that here is something to consider; in the interests of business, in the interests of workers, in the interests of everybody.

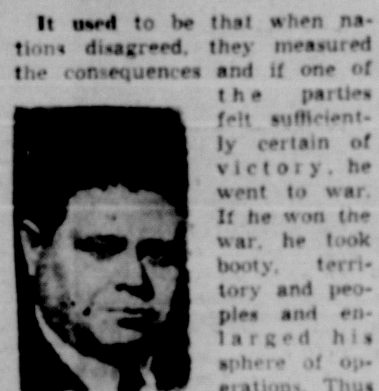

have we heard a Cordon Bleu alumnus or a member of the Culinary Workers Union suggest that his tender feelings have thereby been lacerated.

Carpenters and sculptors alike have managed to retain their composure despite the wide popularity of the term "chiseler"; the American Medical Association has yet to sue for damages because adulterated merchandise or cropped photographs are said to be doctored; folks keep on loafing or soldiering without offending bakers or soldiers.

The plasterers, we say, are hypersensitive and are vainly betraying the fact by attempting to alter the language by resolution.

George Sokolsky Says...

Hydrogen Bomb Made War Impractical; International Relations Must Turn On Talk

It used to be that when nations disagreed, they measured the consequences and if one of the parties felt sufficiently certain of victory, he went to war. If he won the war, he took booty, territory and enlarged his sphere of operations. Thus were empires born, and although it is true that no empire has lasted forever, it is equally true that empires have lasted for enough centuries to enrich the countries that controlled them.

It has generally been the policy of the Powers, as the rich and strong nations liked to call themselves, to keep the weak and backward nations in line or to absorb them. Thus at the Congress of Vienna, which settled the affairs of the world after Napoleon, only six nations were present as principal negotiators. They represented Great Britain, Austria, Prussia, France and the Papal States.

Today, it is different. There are only two Great Powers in terms of military and economic capacity, the United States and Soviet Russia. The enormous British Empire, the French Empire, the Dutch Empire have disappeared their strength by war; the Austro-Hungarian Empire has been destroyed; the German Empire has been divided into two parts, both of which are veritable protectorates; the Japanese Empire has become a small Asiatic country. New forces have risen with which the Western world has little familiarity. Communist China, India, the dictatorship of Nasser in Egypt, Tito's Yugoslavia—these offer problems for which there is little precedent. The Great Powers no longer have long-tested traditions, no binding rules of international law to fall back upon.

The reason that the so-called weak and backward nations find themselves in such a powerful position is that the very existence of the hydrogen bomb has made war impractical, and if nations cannot afford to use war as an instrument for settling international disputes, they have lost the method to which they have been accustomed and have found no effective new methods.

At present, the substitute for war is talk and if John Foster Dulles finds it necessary to fly around the Earth like a veritable satellite, it is that talk is all that is left to international relations and he needs to be wherever the talk is held. The London "Times," in an editorial, thinks that Dulles is too mobile, but for that matter, so is Eden, Pineau, Shepilov, Adenauer, Nehru, Tito, Shigemitsu and every other person responsible for handling the foreign relations of his country.

Conferences have been held either at the summit or at the Foreign Ministers level since the very beginning of World War II and they have increased in number because there is a greater need for them. Curiously, the telephone which brings the Ambassador so much closer at hand than he was even at the end of a cable line, has not served to lessen the arduous travelling of the Foreign Ministers, because in the tough trading that has been going on, particularly between the so-called Great Powers, whose greatness has become illusory, and the weak and backward nations, the latter take umbrage if they are not in contact with authority; final authority, if they can get it. Red China has been laboring for years to get a conference for Chou En-lai with whoever is the American Secretary of State, even if all that might be said at the Conference is "Good morning!"

John Foster Dulles has visited 38 countries. Selwyn Lloyd, who is the British Foreign Minister and successor to Sir Anthony Eden, has, during his short term, been away from his desk practically as much as Dulles, although he had had the advantage that some of the recent conferences have been held in London.

The United States has benefited by Dulles' travels although he, himself, may have suffered not only the fatigue of such living but also the inability to devote himself to the enhancement of his own popularity at home. Dulles was even unable to attend the San Francisco Convention where he could have made a speech and had a moment of applause. Instead he went to Herbert Hoover Jr., to whom applause can matter so little because he has no political ambitions, having experienced early in life the misfortunes of an engineer going into politics and attempting to apply the principles of logic to the illogical course of events.

Fairly Spoken By MARGARET LATROBE Raiding Refrigerator Is Sleeplessness Cure

Getting to sleep, they say, is largely a matter of one's ability to control one's sleep-time mental condition. All right.

"Who's boss around here, anyway?"

Getting to sleep, they say, is real easy. All you need is a clear conscience, a mental image of a Wyoming sheep ranch, and ability to count. Or maybe you need one of those straight hard boards placed between springs and mattress to kind of take the kinks out of that spinal column. Devised originally for folks with backaches, the bedboards—some say—aid one in dropping off to sleep.

It is a good thing about the conscience, but a better one not to go to bed hungry. One of those sheep might pause to graze upon a clump of grass before leaping the fence. And you know what thought transference will do for you! Wasn't there a piece of lemon pie left over from dinner? Doesn't keep too well, in spite of the pie-keeping chambers in our wondrous new refrigerators.

Better just step down and see if that thermostat in the ice box is giving top performance. Wouldn't want the lemon pie to wilt or anything. Besides, didn't we just read that bit of exercise was beneficial for those intent on an eight-hour stretch of dreamless slumber? You betcha, right there in the evening paper. Which reminds us that the kids were working over the second section where the new puzzle appears, and we might also look around for it while exercising and checking up on the icebox controls. Nothing like a little reading before the sandman sifts sugary pink sand of sleep in a person's eyes.

Well, now. We believe every single word the pretty ladies tell us on TV about the virtues of refrigeration. Still, what good is one chicken drumstick? Better start off with meat loaf tomorrow and forget the curried leftover ideas.

Got everything? Better put it on a tray so you don't drop pie on the carpet. The paper—? Under the ditty where it's supposed to be, and a candy bar, too. You're in luck tonight. The chicken, the pie and a wedge of lettuce topped with mayonnaise. Just in the interests of a balanced diet, so to speak. Mayonnaise far nearer empty—and in spite of what they say, we don't figure it should be kept too long, thermostat or no thermostat.

A pot of coffee—small, of course, and we are all set, eh? Getting back to the matter of a clear conscience, doesn't it strike you that eight hours is too much sleep, anyhow?

Robert S. Allen Reports

Joint Atomic Committee Moves To Guard Secrets

Washington, Sept. 4 — Secretary Dulles is under stern warning to make no more agreements giving foreign countries secret information regarding our atomic submarines and highly promising nuclear plane project.

Thus blunt demand has been made by the powerful Joint Atomic Committee on the unanimous action of its 18 Republican and Democratic members.

Immediate cause of the extraordinary crackdown is an agreement under which Britain is to get designs and blueprints of the USS Nautilus, first atomic submarine, and equally secret data on the "Aircraft Nuclear Propulsion Project."

As reported in this column last week, that history-making development is now expected to be achieved in a couple of years.

The Joint Committee's forceful admonition has been conveyed to Dulles in a letter by Senator Clinton Anderson (D-NM), chairman. He also sent an official copy to Atomic Commission Chairman Lewis Strauss.

The British agreement is being credited to Strauss by committee.

Details of this sharply-challenged accord have never been made public. Its unfeared terms are known to the Joint Committee, which has had several private meetings on the subject.

At one of these sessions, W. Sterling Cole, N. Y., ranking Republican committeeman and co-author of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954, charged the British agreement violates Section 114-A of this law. Cole contended this provision authorizes exchanging secret atomic information and material only for peaceful purposes and not for military use.

Strauss replied he had obtained a formal opinion from Attorney General Herbert Brownell upholding the legality of the agreement giving atomic secrets to Britain.

Backstage Clash — The FBI was invoked by another Atomic Commissioner to vigorously challenge this justification by Strauss.

Atomic Commissioner Thomas Murray testified, at a Joint Committee meeting, that the FBI has repeatedly informed the commission that British security standards are far below those of the U.S. in protecting atomic secrets.

The view was clearly indicated by Murray that he believes the FBI doubts the advisability of giving atomic secrets to Britain.

These strong misgivings are also unanimously held by the Joint Committee.

For that reason all the members, Democrats and Republicans alike, voted to direct Secretary Dulles to make no more foreign agreements of this kind until Congress reconvenes and considers the matter next year.

Senator Anderson's letter to the State Department head stresses that the Joint Committee is not opposed to helping British atomic development.

"But in doing that," Anderson declares, "we must be ever vigilant to protect our own security and interests. Under no circumstances must we jeopardize them in the slightest degree."

In addition to barring the revealing of atomic secrets, Anderson's letter also demands the withholding of secret atomic material.

The Joint Committee took this stand because the British agreement is so worded that secret nuclear material, as well as data, can be exchanged without either the President's express authorization or notifying the Joint Committee.

Committeemen contended this is required by the 1954 law, and that it's being circumvented by the secret agreement.

"For these reasons," Anderson wrote Dulles, "it is the Committee's unanimous judgment that other foreign agreements should be postponed until these questions have been resolved."

Note: Representative Cole, who would become chairman of the Joint Committee if the next House of Representatives is controlled by the Republicans, has told colleagues he will introduce legislation dealing specifically with the exchange of atomic military secrets.

John F. Hill, Editor, The Daily Record, Stroudsburg, Pa. Dear Sir:

I was impressed by the church page advertisement which appeared in The Record under date of Aug. 25, 1956.

It was captioned "What Do I Think of When I See a Church?"

I think of my Church! It isn't a big stone, or brick church, but it is a beautiful little wooden white church. It is a place to worship God, pray and sing.

My church inspires me to want to do better. It makes me think more of my family, my friends and neighbors.

I think of the choir leader and the girls, who spend lots of time practicing on hymns, their testimony to God is in the songs they sing. I think of our Pastor, who brings us the word of God, and explains it's meaning to us.

That is what I think, when I see a church.

It seems a Pike County farmer reported the loss of 20 muskox ducks this Summer. Lohmann quickly taught the man to set traps. The farmer caught five raccoons, one porcupine and two opossums—but he continued to lose ducks.

Lohmann made a fox-set and the next morning the farmer found a large fox in the trap. Along side the rangy beast was a dead duck, with its head removed.

Just Between Us

—By Bobby Westbrook

That social calendar started popping like a hot pan full of popcorn yesterday with "First Fall meetings" coming thick and fast. That, combined with the first-day-of-school for toddlers and teen-agers is likely to blow the lid off the rest of the week.

Certainly seemed as if nobody—but nobody—was home yesterday. Service Club members and their wives or husbands were up at Tamiment, school children were making the most of the last day of vacation, and the parents of the smaller children were doing those last-minute shopping chores necessary for that First Day.

Gave the youngsters sort of an odd gait—after a summer of ship-hopping about in sandals and sneakers, they sort of clumped along in those stiff new shoes. And speaking of back-to-school, there's an odd coincidence about the picture Mac got for the social page.

Picking two photogenic children just at random, we discovered that Joy Lynn is an old-hand at this modeling business. She was, if you please, the New Year Baby for 1952 with picture and all. Tell you something else: if Teacher does get those apples, one of them is going to have a bite out of it.

Well, everybody was busy, but I betcha nobody, but nobody, was any busier than Mrs. John Shupp and Emma Jane. They are crowding into two days all the final preparations for the wedding that was originally planned for the end of the month.

When military orders come through, miracles have to happen—and fortunately, do. Including the bridesmaids' shoes, though they were quite prepared to go barefoot if necessary. Anyway, I'll bet it will be a wonderful wedding tonight—though if everybody is a little out of breath, you'll understand why.

Garden Club Board Thursday

The executive board of the Monroe County Garden Club will meet at the home of Mrs. Paul Fetherman, 1100 Dreher Ave., Stroudsburg, on Thursday at 2:15 p.m.

All reservations for the club's trip to the Bronx Botanical Garden later in the month must be in by the board meeting.

Working Girls Need Extra Care For That Neat Look

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Beauty Editor

You may go off to work looking like Tidy Tess but arrive there giving the appearance of the bedraggled Bess. The trick to the job may take its toll of good looks.

If aware of the insidious forces at work we may be able to cope with the problem.

Makeup base applied to the face and neck as beauticians advise for that all-over even tone is likely to leave its stain on dress collars, unless it is blotted well before you set off to work. Models apply cold water to the neck area after using foundation cream and powder. Then they blot it off with tissue. This is supposed to set the stain.

If you wear a coat to work, you might put cleansing tissues around the neckline of your dress. By the time you arrive on the job, the foundation smudge will have been absorbed by it.

Hemlines and petticoat edges may sweep up dirt when you walk up or down stairs or board a bus, unless you are careful to spare a hand to raise your skirt. Train window ledges always seem to be dusty, leading up elbows and cuffs with soot, grime and drizzle on rainy days. Steering wheels can soil gloves, so that fact that you ride to work doesn't always get you there looking like a Handbox Betty.

Shoe polish can rub off on ankles. Wrists, neck and earlobes may be discolored by metallic jewelry. Fur collars are real dirt catchers in winter-time, leaving an impression at your neckline.

The trick is to arrive at work early enough to scrub up so that you at least get a clean start. Check vital points mentioned and wash the area with soap and water. If there isn't time to remove stockings to cleanse ankle bone area of shoe polish, massage it lightly with soap and water right over your nylons. Remove the soap and water. Then blot your stockings with paper towels or tissues. They should dry in a jiffy.

These days of half-slips, women are becoming more aware that dye in dark fabrics may crack off, not only on to shoulders and bra straps, but stain the torso wherever body heat and dark clothing come in contact. Special attention should be paid to this area at the nightly shower or bath when a good soaping is in order so that dirt does not become imbedded. It's a good idea too to wear dark undergarments and full slips with dark dresses.

Many women work at "smudge jobs" these days—typists with carbon paper and factory workers with oily machines—that work requires must be utilized to put us back in that good-looking category before we start off for home or that evening date at the end of the day.

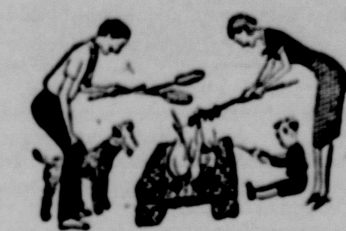

A CHARMING ladylike dress that is dressy without being fussy has a day-length skirt and is splendid for small evenings when one wants to look nice without overdoing things. The off-the-shoulder neckline is well draped with bows at either side. Asymmetric draping on the skirt at one side forms a peg top, at the other a pleated panel. The material is a rich but subdued black crepe, one that handles well.

Whale Meat, Banana Splits, Tile Roofs And Grieg Home Please Visitor To Bergen

(Miss Helen Donaldson, of Timber Hill Farm, Oregon, and Pembroke College of Brown University, is spending the summer in Norway as a member of the student group Experiment in International Living. She continues an account of her adventures.)

Bergen, Norway—The next day we went by bus and train to Bergen. I loved Bergen—somehow it has more atmosphere than Oslo. It is a wonderful conglomeration of the very modern and very old. We stayed on the Soma, a ship anchored in the harbor which is run like a hotel. In the evening we could go out on deck and be right in the middle of the harbor and all the fishing boats that were anchored for the night, and in the daytime directly off the ship into the outdoor market which is the focus of life.

It is predominantly a fish market and there you buy fish that is really fish. It is in Bergen that they won't eat fish that have been dead more than a couple of hours. There are huge tanks in which live fish are swimming, waiting for the customers. Then there are great pieces of something white and others of red. We decided the latter must be whale. I've eaten that and it is quite good—it's meat, really, not fish.

Little streams of red water were running over the ground toward the harbor. In the late afternoon, after the market has all been packed up and moved away, they wash the pavement with hoses. There is another section of the market which sells flowers and still another which sells vegetables.

There is a very wide main street, in the center of which is a huge information stand, but winding up the hill are the exceedingly narrow cobblestone streets of old Bergen. Just opposite the ship, on one side of the harbor, were the old, old houses with high pointed roofs which housed the Hansa League.

Bergen is actually in a valley with seven "mountains" rising around it. Some of the steep streets ending in steps reminded me a little of Montreal and then again of College Hill in Providence. The first afternoon we took a semi-trolley car up one of the hills to the top where there is a beautiful view of the city spread out below a city which doesn't look in the least American, with its tile roofs, its four or five-story buildings with high pointed roofs, and its narrow streets. Bergen is the second largest city in Norway but you never have a feeling that it's a big city because of the hills which you see from almost any part of it.

Grieg's Home

The next day, we took a short train trip out of the city to the home of Edward Grieg, which was utterly charming. It is set upon a hill overlooking a lake and is quite surrounded by trees.

for us from all over the room, and asking us if we had enjoyed the ice cream as we left.

And there were other friendly people—like the man going by on the street who overheard me ask what a certain building was and stopped and told me, and another man who heard us speaking English and stopped to ask if we had one of the guide books.

Banana Splits

Another nice incident in our Bergen stay was my discovery of a place that served ice cream sundaes, sodas, banana splits, and milkshakes. The sign in front advertised ice cream in huge letters in English, apparently aimed at tourists. But it was in an out of the way corner and was quite crowded with Norwegians. Perhaps they don't really get too many Americans, judging from the way the host fell all over us when we came in—moving a man to another table so that we could have a place to sit together, serving us himself, gathering chairs

After-School Snacks to Fill Fall Famine

With the beginning of school, the children's summertime appetites start working overtime, and wise parents will be prepared for the after-school famine victims with snacks that are good for them, and will hold them over until dinner time.

Here are three hearty ones: For example, Peanut Butter Shortbread will last only a short while after it is served.

Sift 1½ c. already sifted flour once. Measure and add ¼ c. sugar, ¼ tsp. salt and sift again.

Cut in ½ c. butter (chilled) with pastry blender or 2 knives until mixture looks like coarse meal.

Add 2 tbsp. light corn syrup. Mix thoroughly.

Shape into 1½ in. rolls, then cut in ¼ in. slices.

Bake on ungreased cookie sheet in 325° F. oven, 20 min. or until light brown.

Approximate yield: 4 dozen slices.

This mixture, if desired, can be stored in refrigerator or freezer. If rolls are wrapped tightly in waxed paper, to be baked when needed.

Excellent Treat
Stuffed eggs, California style, are an excellent treat at this time of year.

Cut 6 hard-cooked eggs in lengthwise halves. Remove yolks and rub through sieve. Add ¼ tsp. salt, ¼ tsp. black pepper, ¼ tsp. dry mustard, 1½ tsp. Worcestershire sauce, 1½ tsp. grated onion, 2 tsp. butter, melted, 1 tsp. chili sauce and ¼ tsp. celery seeds.

Add ¼ c. mayonnaise, beating until fluffy. Then add 8 chopped, ripe olives.

Refill egg whites, leaving surface roughened.

Jam Eggnog
How about a jam eggnog when that youngster comes in hot and tired after a busy day in the sun?

It is especially good for the child who has to have plenty of milk and eggs but who balks at these items when they are served straight.

So for a delicious disguise,

Canasta Club Holds Picnic—Indoors, As Usual

Mount Pocono—The Canasta Club held their annual picnic Thursday and as usual had to move it indoors. The rain and fog did not hamper the appetites nor the spirits of the picnicers. Supper was served at six and the night was spent playing cards and other entertainment.

Those who attended were: Mr. and Mrs. John Kepan Sr., Mr. and Mrs. J. Harold Stegner, Cynthia, Amy and Johnny; Mrs. A. J. Vlossak, Miss Joan Vlossak, Mrs. George Wagner, Miss Lois Wagner, Miss Mabel Storm, Mrs. Ida Warner, Mrs. Ruth Kelley, Mrs. Leona Robinson and Mr. and Mrs. John Sutton.

One member who is still convalescing at home, enjoyed her picnic supper at her home and joined the group by talking to them by phone.

combine in a bowl 1 c. chilled milk, 1½ tsp. strawberry preserves or jam, dash of salt, 1 egg yolk, dash each of cinnamon and nutmeg.

Beat well with rotary or electric beater. Just before serving, fold in 1 stiffly beaten egg white. Serve in tall glasses topped with a dash of nutmeg. Instead of strawberry, pineapple, black raspberry or apricot jam will do as well.

WOOL TWEED in green and brown muted check, punctuated by little nubs of multi-color proves a good fabric choice for a nice tweed suit for Fall. A dropped shoulder line is achieved by means of a yoke which terminates in seaming down either side of the front closing. Tabs cut in one with the yoke conceal pockets. The semi-fitted jacket has an easy looseness and the skirt is smartly straight.

Men's Hats

Trendsetters predict colorful attire for men in the near future. Blue is said to be the new hat color. Blue bands go to gray hats, brown to black hats and gray bands circle blue hats. The new contour for the man's hat is the teardrop shape with level top crown. The brim of 1½ inches is at its narrowest, but trims for hats will be gayer than ever. There are velvet and iridescent bands and some hats are trimmed in striped neckwear style bands.

THE Wyckoff SHOPPER

It always amazes me how quickly one is plunged into a month that begins on a weekend and boasts an adjacent holiday. It's something like slipping from the edge of a diving board before one was poised for the downward flight. As I write this column, I am beginning to think I've drifted into the wrong office. Instead of the usual assembling of ads, there's nothing but art work going on. Shorty Widmer is busy with a new Wyckoff gift certificate, and Walter Wyckoff is sketching a tree. Incidentally, a Wyckoff gift certificate is a real work of art these days. The printed form that was used for so many years past, is now out of service and Shorty's masterpiece is being sold at our cashier's desk. These are really lovely, and so official looking. I bet Shorty could be an expert counterfeiter with his talents. It's a good thing he isn't interested in a life of crime. My favorite white earrings are turning pink now that summer draws to a close. I wonder why so many white articles, including some of my pale shirtings and slacks, do that? One of the difference whether they turn pink or crumby gray? Either way they've had their day. Maybe she's right. Next year the jewelry we love now will be as old as an old hat. There are only two donkeys left from Walter Wyckoff's unusual assortment of children's television rugs, but I notice that their tongues are hanging out. "That was Dave Crowley's idea when it was hot yesterday," Walter admitted. "He cut the tongues from our adhesive Deco-raz." Those rugs are cute as can be, with stuffed heads that children find very cuddlesome. And they're on order once again. I have only one complaint about Walter's floor covering department—once he spies you there he won't let you escape, if you've a pen and paper in hand, until you've made notes of everything. Before my tour ended, I had jotted down about the lamb's wool brush that is meant for walls but would double exquisitely as a powder puff; the rubber ovals for bath, kitchen, or just inside the front and back doors, that come in two sizes at 95c and 1.15, and the Year Round Door Mats of nubbly rubber which sell at 2.95 and 4.95 in sizes 14 x 20 and 18 x 27, respectively. These mats are wonderfully efficient in removing mud and soil from shoes. They also extend a greeting as cordial as a handshake. They can say "Hi Folks, or, if one wishes to be helpful to the stranger, they can pinpoint your home as being that of the Smiths, Joneses, or who are you?" The personalized mat greets at 7.58. In red, blue, green, or black, the printed words are of a contrasting cream rubber. I presume if one wished to become a hermit or merely anti-social, Walter could order one made up with just one terse instruction—"SCRAM!"

With the advent of the knitting bag and the tote bag, I am often at a loss to know where the art goods department ends and the handbag department begins. Certainly they parallel each other and even step on each other's toes every once in a while. One case in point would be the big roomy leather or fabric carry-alls in Bea Giorgio's department; another would be the Margaret Smith bag in Amy Eilenberger's section of the store. The Smith bag is, I believe, one of the handsomest Amy stocks. It is of a very dark blue printed in a tiny lightish blue, and the fabric is a chintz that goes smartly with just about any type of apparel. The lining is of a bright red, and the top closing is of the spring type without clasp. A bag like this would have dozens of uses besides looking smart. I'll bet you'd have paid me a visit Friday night had you ever guessed what was happening in my office! Jean Decker had brought three rabbits to work, and Blanche Mackey had roasted them on our Frigidaire rotisserie in the appliance department. She had also made a marvelous casserole of "noodles and things." So ours was a dinner fit for a king. Jeannie and Bea Brink ate early, with Dotie Sturdevant, Betty Frantz, Blanche, Marie Cohen and myself enjoying the later hour. Marie was the guest of honor, having left our Gift Wrap center as of Saturday to return to college. We're going to miss these "younguns" as Papa Wyckoff might call them, now that the school bells are ringing again. It was pleasant having them around.

H. C. Archibald Co. Appointed Dealer For Beautycraft Curr-Line Kitchens

"IF WE'RE not being too inquisitive, what kind of a person are you?"

"Modern-minded, an antique fancier, cranky about quality, like spaciousness and compactness, captivated by color?"

These are some of the questions the H. C. Archibald Co. Beautycraft kitchen stylist may ask you when you visit the newly remodeled Main St. showroom.

Archibald was recently appointed the authorized dealer in this locality for Beautycraft "Curr-Line Kitchens... the kitchen which won four out of seven awards in the local "Kitchen Tours" contest.

Kitchen On Display

A complete Beautycraft custom kitchen has been installed in the Archibald showroom. It includes everything from cabinets, countertops to built-in oven, range and sink.

Arthur Henning, owner-manager of Archibald's says they plan to specialize in the planning and installation of custom Beautycraft kitchens. "We'll handle everything for a customer," he explained, "from the initial kitchen design, painting, floor covering, countertop, appliance and cabinet installations.

"No need to see several different persons for your new kitchen installation; we can handle everything in one visit to our showroom!"

Rust-Oleum Cuts Costs

HERE'S the modern, practical way to save even badly rusted metal surfaces—a way that usually eliminates sandblasting, chemical pre-cleaning, and other costly surface preparations.

Simply scrape and wirebrush to remove rust scale and loose rust—then brush Rust-Oleum 769 Damp-Proof Red Primer right over the remaining rust.

Easy as that to cut maintenance costs, and save even badly rusted metal—because Rust-Oleum's specially processed fish oil base penetrates rust to bare metal incorporating the rust particles into the coating.

All Colors

You beautify as you protect, because Rust-Oleum is available in practically all colors, including aluminum and white. It dries free of objectionable odor to a firm, decorative coating that resists salt water, salt air, sun, fumes, heat, and many other rust-producing conditions.

But you have to try it yourself to "get the feel" of Rust-Oleum; see how easy it is to use—it's self-leveling—leaves no brushmarks; to see how many ways it can save you money on gutters, pipes, machinery, equipment, trucks, beams, metal sash, wire fences, stacks, girders, etc. Try it on your rust problem. It says more than a thousand words.

Rust-Oleum is available in this area at the Pocono Paint-Up Center, 722 Main St., Stroudsburg.

Don't Paint Outdoor Ladders

THERE ARE two good reasons why ladders should never be painted. First, the paint will hide any cracks in the wood and secondly water will get in under the film and rot the wood.

Best treatment for a wood ladder—particularly one that is to be used outdoors—is a coat of linseed oil.

Eagle-Picher Storm Window Recommended By DeRenzi's

ANY INVESTMENT you make in your home which might cost several hundred dollars deserves some careful looking into.

This is especially true in the choice of proper aluminum storm windows. Albert DeRenzi, of the Joseph G. DeRenzi & Son firm points out, the DeRenzi firm, located at 211 N. Sixth St., is an authorized distributor of Eagle-Picher aluminum storm enclosures.

Eagle-Picher, Mr. DeRenzi adds, is a nationally recognized name, noted as a producer of highest quality products for more than a century.

He invites you to compare your own Eagle-Picher's superiority and exclusive quality features. "Before you buy, compare... and you'll choose Eagle-Picher," he asserts.

"Styled by Raymond Loewy, Eagle-Picher storm enclosures are the standard of excellence for storm window quality, beauty, durability, rugged construction, convenience, and all 'round trouble-free performance."

"If it's a practical, desirable storm window feature, Eagle-Picher Triple-Slides have it. But see for yourself. Check for yourself. Compare for yourself."

"Match Eagle-Picher Triple-Slide storm windows with any other kind. You'll see the outstanding difference in value, real honest-dollar value."

Katz & Son Installing New Systems

MODERNIZATION of the heating system is the answer to sluggish heat, higher than normal fuel bills, and uneven heat distribution. Robert H. Collins, manager of D. Katz & Sons Plumbing & Heating Dept., points out.

It is during the summer months that the overhauling of the home heating plant can be carried on with the minimum of interference with family routine.

Hundreds of home heating plants, Mr. Collins points out, are still limping along with systems originally made for solid fuel. The entire system can be given a lift by a new unit designed especially for modern fuels.

Fuel economy, more room, and better appearance to say nothing of better heating will result from this change, Mr. Collins adds.

Baseboard Convectors

Revolutionary changes have been made in heat distributors. Available for replacing old-style radiators are inconspicuous baseboards which provide a high degree of comfort by heating the lower part of the room and blanketing outside walls with a curtain of warmth.

Also available are streamlined convectors with attractive modern lines which can be installed free-standing or recessed.

The difficulties which householders have with many heating systems can be corrected by better thermostatic control.

If you desire a free estimate on repair or replacement of your present heating system, call D. Katz & Sons plumbing and heating division (2369).

Right now D. Katz & Sons are offering customers 100 gallons of fuel oil free with every new installation of oil burning equipment.

Surest Fly Weapon

GENEVA, July 24 (P)—The fly swatter is still the surest weapon against the house fly. World Health Organization experts have reported that resistance to insect killers is becoming universal among house flies.

Cut Hardy Climbers

DO NOT LET hardy climbers run wild. Keep cutting off the long ungainly shoots whenever they reach a length that offends the eye or interferes with windows, doors or paths. This pruning adds to their density by encouraging more liberal branching.

Stroudsburg Boy Graduates In Mexico

WILLARD M. BENNETT, 745 Main St., Stroudsburg, received his Bachelor of Arts degree from Mexico City College recently.

Attending the graduation ceremonies at the 9,000-foot high campus were his mother, Mrs. Hazel Bennett, and a friend of the family, Mrs. Dorothy Aiken, of Gilbert.

At Mexico City College Bennett majored in journalism, with a minor in creative writing. His academic writing requirements were fulfilled with the publication of several dozen Sunday newspaper and magazine articles, the completion of a collection of short stories, and two plays. While at MCC he also served as managing editor of the campus newspaper and assistant to the Director for Public Relations.

Drama Department
Bennett worked closely with the college's drama department head, Professor Richard Posner, veteran of eight years under director Elia Kazan and member of the select New York City playwright's group, "The New Dramatists". Posner announced recently that he plans an early Mexico production of Bennett's one-act play, "Merry Christmas, Christine!" which he has termed as "a very moral play, dealing with immoral characters."

Bennett graduated from Stroudsburg High School in 1948, spent four and one-half years with the Far-East Air Force, and entered college in the fall of 1953 as a Korean GI Bill student. In September he will complete the editing of a novel by A. J. Snow, Columbia University professor, which will be published by Alfred A. Knopf of New York. He later plans to pursue a career in television writing in either the United States, Mexico or Japan.

Two New Polio Deaths

CHICAGO, Sept. 4 (AP)—The Board of Health today reported 22 new cases of polio with two deaths over the Labor Day weekend.

The cases raised Chicago's total for the year to 993, with 31 deaths. In 1952, the previous high incidence year, 595 cases and 31 deaths had occurred by the same date.

None of this year's fatal cases had received all three Salk vaccine shots.

Royal Adviser Suggests Name

LONDON, Sept. 4 (AP)—An adviser to Queen Elizabeth II says Prince Charles should take the name of King Oliver II when he ascends the throne.

The suggestion was made by Isaac Foot, a member of the Queen's Privy Council and president of the Cromwell Assn. The organization honors Oliver Cromwell, who ruled England as Lord Protector of the Commonwealth in the 17th century but never became king.

Charles is not likely to face the problem soon. He is only seven and his mother is only 30.

THE RECORD

By Bob Clark
Sports Editor

Farsightedness is something that we all have at one time or another. But the Stroud Union School Board is seeing to it that the future "guests" at the 12th street institution won't be lacking in space and facilities in the coming years.

A look yesterday at the new athletic area just south of Gordon City Field proves the administrative heads of education are looking very definitely into the future.

At present, only a discing of the area proposed for two football fields, a baseball diamond and a 440-yard track, with a 220-yard straightaway, is completed.

Work starts today on the grading of the area which measures in the neighborhood of 120 yards by 150 yards.

It isn't hard to visualize a large group of junior high students working out for gym credits in a spacious area that one-time bordered on congestion.

It isn't hard to see track, one of the very few individual sports, in full bloom on a cinderpath second to none.

It also isn't hard to see a high school coach able to work out two sets of infields at one time instead of one unit taking over the others, more or less, disintegrating on the sidelines.

The men manning the Stroud Union School Board are not letting the grass grow under their feet. Instead they're planning to put a lawn where dirt, stones, gravel and tree stumps once stood.

With the enlarging of the athletic plant, plus its forwardness in preparing for the already enlarged student enrollment, the board has acted overwhelmingly for the younger generation. To this we all are indebted.

No many times youth is overlooked, especially when a little initiative is needed most. But this is not the case with the Stroud Union hierarchy. A glimpse at the workout in the vicinity of West Main St., verifies this no end.

We apologize to the Anomalink nine of the Pocono Mountain League for our misfire on their final league standing. We had it four wins and 13 losses when it should have read five victories and 13 setbacks.

The runoff for the playoff championship of the Monroe County Softball League is definitely set for Saturday and Sunday at the Stroudsburg playground field.

The combatants are Nebel's Market, first half kings, and Tucker's Chevrolet, second half kings, the Tucker's Chevrolet, second half champs. Saturday's game is slated to get started at 3 p.m. sharp.

Manager "Junior" Warner of the Daily Record bowling team showed mid-season form yesterday when he rolled 559 in his first effort, preparing for the opening of the Industrial League pin season.

However, two of Warner's proteges had a rougher time as "Speed" Stuckey and Kenny Chase, ball encyclopedia, Eames went below the 500 mark in the pre-season workouts at Harmon's Recreation, East Stroudsburg.

The Varsity "E" Club of East Stroudsburg has quite a program lined up for the football season, with sessions slated prior to every game of the Cavaliers, Reg Numan, and his crew are leaving no stone unturned in an effort to get the town's support behind Jack Kist's 1956 gridiron edition.

Word Out Pitt Has 'Doc tor Jock's Remedy'

NEW YORK, Sept. 4 (AP)—The word is out that Pittsburgh's 1956 football squad is "just what the doctor would have ordered." That may mean that Pitt, instead of perennial Notre Dame, will wind up at the head of the dwindling list of major college teams that don't play in any recognized league.

The doctor, of course, means Dr. John Bain Sutherland, who coached and led Pitt football to its greatest seasons, when the Panthers were almost automatic nominees for the unofficial Eastern championship. His pupil, Johnny Michelosen, has come up with the same sort of rock-hard, power-playing athletes that used to delight Sutherland.

Mixup Leaves Everyone But Bettors Happy

LEWES, England, Sept. 4 (AP)—A racing mixup in which one jockey rode two horses and one horse was ridden by two jockeys left everybody laughing here yesterday, except, as usual, most of the bettors.

Chipperone, a 9-2 shot with Cliff Lines up, got the idea, dumped his rider on the turf and also took off. Gethin trotted after his mount and after a furlong encountered Chipperone, who had stopped to graze. Gethin mounted Chipperone and rode down to the mile post, where he caught Game Rights.

Through Reins
It developed that Game Rights had stuck his foot through the reins and broken one of them. Spotting a bystander nearby, Gethin demanded: "Quick, man! Off with your shoes and give me the laces." The bystander complied and Gethin bound the reins together with the laces and rode off.

Meanwhile Lines arrived and remounted Chipperone. They returned to the starting point and the race was off 20 minutes late.

The race was won by the outsider Boisterous, with Al Harrison up, at 7-1. Chipperone was second and Game Rights third.

Gethin's careless bystander finished somewhere down the track.

Rizzuto Gets Name 'Price' PR Contract

HILLSIDE, N. J., Sept. 4 (AP)—Phil Rizzuto, recently released by the New York Yankees after 16 years at shortstop, got a "name-your-own-price" contract from a Puerto Rican team today.

Rizzuto, who is considering a flood of baseball, radio and TV offers, declined to say immediately whether he would fill in the blank contract offered by the San Juan Senators.

The Puerto Rican League team is managed by an ex-Yankee teammate, catcher Ralph Houk. Rizzuto trained in San Juan in 1947 with the Yanks.

Nines Cards
Rizzuto already has turned down a chance to play the rest of the season for the St. Louis Cardinals. The 38-year-old shortstop, who has been riding the bench most of the past season, said he had not ruled out the idea of sometime returning to the Yankee organization.

He was knocked off the active list Saturday, Aug. 25, to make room for Eas (Country) Slaughter of the Kansas City Athletics.

Pen Argyl Coaches Optimistic After Drill Of Green Wave

PEN ARGYL—Pen Argyl High School's football team went through its first intrasquad scrimmage Saturday at Woonas Park with the entire squad of 44 men getting their big chance. Coach Rudy Penza said, "The team in general looked pretty good, but there is a lot of individual work that must be done and even though some of the boys looked good, the starting positions are wide open. Penza added, "Some boys that we did not plan on are coming through with good performances." He said it would be impossible to pick a starting backfield unit from Carl Bone, Martin Smickley, Sammy Lenz, Richard Ramsey, James Sandercock, Robert Sivercool, Ronney Gierro, Richard Dolder, Dominick Best and Ronald Shipman because they all could easily be on the starting unit.

Line Standouts

Line coaches Richard Wolford and Harry Mervine expressed the same situation with the line. However, they did say that Carl Slough, Anthony Uliana, Gary Stackhouse, Gary Schlegel and Mike Dulac looked plenty promising. The latter, Dulac, may likely get the starting nod if he continues with the same progress he has shown up until now.

Competition

Dulac plays end and has plenty competition from Buddy Zonce, Robert Frutchee, and Eddy Lugg all lettermen from last year except Zonce. Frutchee, who played center last year has looked good at his new end position and is rough backing up the line on defense.

Another change that Coach Penza made was to move James Sandercock from center to fullback. The center slot will most likely be handled by William Ruggiero who has been on the sick list for the last week with a severe cold.

Coach Wolford added that "We are weakest at tackle, but Danny Capozzola, Duane Parsons and Gary Stackhouse will probably handle the situation adequately by game time."

Experience, Depth

Penza and his assistants Richard Wolford, Blaine Strunk, John Lakey and Harry Mervine, all voice that experience and depth is there and to this point, the boys have a good attitude. If this persists we could have a good season. Penza added, "We firmly believe that poor attitude beat us last year."

Basilio Set For Bid At Welter Title

ALEXANDRIA, BAY, N. Y., Sept. 3 (AP)—Former welterweight champion Carmen Basilio began his return to the ring today for his 29-year-old, Chitonaug, N. Y., challenger contented himself with a light gym workout this afternoon. Tomorrow he will break camp and head for Syracuse where he will wind up his training. Basilio already has boxed more than 100 rounds and has had three sessions of 10-rounds each. There was talk that Basilio had overtrained for his March 14 bout with Saxton in Chicago where he lost the title. For that fight Basilio worked almost 200 rounds.

Not In Gym

"I won't leave my fight in the gym this time," said Basilio. Meanwhile Saxton, only a pound or two over the 147-pound limit, took the day off at his Summit, N. Y., training quarters. He will resume boxing tomorrow. The 25-year-old champion is in fine condition. He had two tuneup fights last month.

Baltimore Team Softball Champs

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa., Sept. 3 (AP)—Baltimore's White Coffee Pot won the Central Atlantic regional softball tournament today for the seventh straight year by defeating Reading House, of Reading, Pa., 5-0.

Reading went into the finals by beating Gross and Sons of Baltimore 2-1 earlier today.

The schedule at East Stroudsburg on September 21 on the Cavaliers' field.

Brooks Hitting Not Hurling Failing In Pennant Drive

BROOKLYN, Sept. 3 (AP)—It was the Brooklyn Dodgers' pitching that most fans expected to weaken under the strain of seven games over the Labor Day weekend. Instead it was the hitters who let the Brooks slump 3½ games off Milwaukee's pace when that torturing stint was ended.

In respect to pitching and double-headers, the worst is over now and it seems likely that Ralph Branca, resigned Monday for emergency duty, might not pitch at all. Brooklyn doesn't have another doubleheader on the scheduled program.

From Friday night through Monday, the Dodgers played seven games and won four. They made only 51 hits, an average of barely over seven a game. Two pitchers went the route and Don Drysdale hurried 16 innings on three consecutive days.

Proud of Pitching

"I was proud of the pitching," said Manager Walt Alston. "A few hits would have won some of those games for us. I know our batters are not as bad as they have looked. We have to count on them coming to life with some help. If they want the pennant, it is there to be taken."

The Dodgers had a day off to rest. Then they will play one more game with the Pirates and a long series with the Giants before facing Milwaukee next Tuesday and Wednesday. Alston plans to send Don Newcombe and Sal Maglie.

Says He Is Strong

Branca, a Dodger for eight seasons before his arm gave out, says he is strong and fast enough to be of some help to the team. In the hitting department, Gil Hodges has been the principal offender. But compared to other years, it has been just a seasonal slump for the whole team.

Junior Gilliam has been the most consistent hitter and his average is just .300. Carl Furillo had a hot streak but has dropped back to .298. Duke Snider, 0 for 17 until he got a hit Monday, has a .287 mark. Hodges and Roy Campanella, usually reliable at the plate, are down to .254 and .223, respectively.

Pitcher Dobrine of Iowa led the Big Ten in strikeouts with 41, one more than Galen Cisco of Ohio State.

Pocono Playhouse

New Play By Chodorov

Stars Gloria Vanderbilt

By Leonard Randolph

MOUNTAINHOME—Romantic comedy is difficult stuff in modern theatre.

The road to success for the aspiring romanticist is paved with the pitfalls of high pressure, everyday living and the super-salesmanship of glossy-domed movie moguls who would have us believe that Sex is the thing you cram in your shopping bag along with the Readers Digest and Woman's Day. You can buy this commodity in the large economy size package—Anita Ekberg meets Steve Cochran, Marlon Brando and Jayne Mansfield repose in blissful tropical heat on the leopard skin blanket.

Everything—or nearly everything—in modern entertainment is slanted at the overt expression of one emotion or another. For this reason, perhaps more than any other, the comedy of man, woman and a little alien to our culture and the genteel ramifications of romantic farce are a little too complex and cultivated for taste buds which respond easily to Martin and Lewis or the fraudulent heftiness of a play staged by Joshua Logan.

Edward Chodorov is a brave man. I'd be forced to say this to day for three basic reasons. First—He has attempted a romantic and fluffy comedy about royalty called "The Spa" which opened Monday night at Pocono Playhouse. Second—He has directed same. Third—He has based his play on a work by Ferenc Molnar, left it in what I presume to be its original period, then apparently proceeded to shuffle Mr. Molnar around a bit to suit the changing temper of his own attitude toward the play.

Good Points

Although I do not like "The Spa" as a play or as a production, I'm happy to say I found some things in it to like a great deal and I certainly would not count myself in that rather large number of persons who speak of Mr. Chodorov's minor work as one of the theatrical horrors of the past decade. With all its weaknesses in writing and direction, "The Spa" would still make a pleasant one-act comedy and that's precisely what I think it should be.

Chodorov has been ill-advised in at least one major respect, it seems to me. This is in his use of the hackneyed old film device "The Flashback", an hallucination of at least half of the movies made during the 30's and 40's which I had thought would pass on to become part of the musty archives of peevish devices along with 3-D. In "The Spa" the flashback is dragged in by the heels, serves absolutely no useful function what, ever and destroys 90 per cent of what might have been a charming, if not suspensefully romantic, situation.

Even if "The Spa" were a better play, however, I think it would need different direction. It lacks, somewhat sadly, the high stylistic fun of good sophisticated old-fashioned fluff in its farcical moods.

And, more than anything else, it would need a couple of replacements in its casting. The largest change here, I think, would be in the role currently being filled by Violet Heming. Miss Heming is an actress of considerable experience, noteworthy stage charm and accomplished if presently misplaced—technical skill. But she is not even remotely in communion with Mr. Chodorov's grand material, "Clementine."

Most of the attention in "The Spa" is directed, of course, at the girl who plays "Princess Olympia." This is unfortunate for Gloria Vanderbilt, who plays the role, because it is the most lackluster part in the play "Olympia" is the topic of much conversation, but she treads in and out of scenes much like a messenger boy and has little, often nothing, to do. Miss Vanderbilt does the part with detachment, calm and a composure which would turn the best princess in the world into a pink, Turhan Bey is cast as the "love interest" (and this is an exaggeration, to be sure) and I thought he was a bit uncomfortable throughout. He was still good, however, and he could be much better if the part were more finished.

Outstanding

Stefan Schnabel does as much as he possibly can with the thankless and pompously-puffy part of "Rudolph" and G. Albert Smith does the same with one of the family uncles. I thought Paula Lawrence floundered about as "Lina" even more than the writing would seem to beg for.

It is when two of the play's supposedly "minor" characters come onstage that "The Spa" begins to come alive. They are the butler, "Dokleemann", played by Vladimir Sokoloff and "Col. Krehl" played by Johnathan Harris. Sokoloff goes far beyond Chodorov in creating the humor of his character, literally manufacturing it on stage in front of the audience's eyes and it is sheer joy when he is really at work. Harris has less to do as the stiff, cold-eyed colonel but he makes the most of every second of it.

If you want to see Gloria Vanderbilt, I certainly think you owe it to yourself to go up and see her. While you're at it you'll also see another of Ballou's magnificent sets which have become standard equipment at Pocono Playhouse, some effective lighting by Edward Scheff and pleasant costumes by Guy Kent.

Don't expect much of the play. "The Spa" may be potentially an effective comedy. As it now stands it is a little too muddled-headed for its own good. No one really appears to know what's going on, what's happened or what's the use. Nowadays a romantic farce has to be adroitly handled to overcome the conditioning of host audiences. "The Spa" is not.

If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Signs Of Split Over Suez Canal

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Foreign News Analyst

IF THE Suez Canal crisis drives a wedge between the United States and its Western partners, the Communist world will be the winner—and there are disturbing signs of a Western split.

As the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's Permanent Council meets today on the Suez developments, there is evidence that Washington is worried about the British-French buildup of military strength in the Mediterranean and with French insistence on measures to "stop Nasser" now.

President Nasser seems to recognize the possibilities for a Western power split over Suez policy. He has had soothing words for Washington, arguing that the latest statement from the White House on the crisis "indicates that in general outline President Eisenhower's viewpoint is the same as that of Egypt."

NATO's Council is meeting on the Suez crisis because it is a NATO problem. Half of Western Europe's supply of oil is shipped through the Suez Canal. Three-quarters of the shipping belongs to NATO countries. The security of Europe is threatened by the potentialities of the Suez crisis, which could lead eventually to a wave of nationalization of Western oil interests and even the pipelines.

Position

The British position is that Western Europe cannot rely on an Egyptian promise to guarantee free navigation through the canal, and that accepting Nasser's word for this would be making the economic future and even the defense of Western Europe dependent upon his good will.

The French position is even more uncompromising because France believes what happens in Egypt now will profoundly influence events in North Africa later on. A victory for Nasser, giving him unfettered control of the canal—even though with international advice—would surely be a shot in the arm for the rebellion in Algeria.

The British seemed to have welcomed American initiative in bringing about proposals for a peaceful solution which might avert military action. But it is plain that Britain's government will accept no solution leaving the international waterway at the mercy of a single nation, to be exploited purely for purposes of Egyptian national policy. Prime Minister Eden has warned that while Britain wants to avoid a solution by force, "We must make sure that the life of the great trading nations of the world cannot in the future be strangled at any moment by some interruption to free passage through the canal."

The United States wants to avoid conflict in the Middle East, with all the ominous implications it would have. The Soviet Union, too, is skittish about those possibilities, which conceivably could bring about a world war situation.

No Stop

But this does not stop the U.S.S.R. from beaming inflammatory broadcasts in the Arabic language to the Middle East, or from permitting the impression to get abroad in that area that Moscow stands ready to help the Arabs in a crisis.

Moscow cannot be expected to throw away the big advantage which has been tossed in its lap. Not only is the current crisis having an erosive effect on Western influence in the Middle East, but it is beginning to gnaw away at the unity of the Western powers with the United States. Given the proper handling by the Russians, there might be an opportunity to bring about the beginning of the end of NATO. If NATO comes apart, communism can expand once again.

Seamen Try Again

NORTH SIDNEY, N. S., Sept. 4 (AP)—Folled in their attempt, two Toronto men have set sail again for England, hoping to reach Dartmouth in 30 or 40 days. Bert Smith, 31, and Allan Battersby, 29, left here Aug. 20 hoping to be the first to sail a small boat from Toronto to England. The sea flooded their boat and they put back in for repairs. Last weekend they sailed out again.

Buses May Aid Health Problem

NEW YORK, Sept. 4 (AP)—The city's commissioner of air pollution control wants city buses fueled by bottled propane gas, instead of gasoline or diesel fuel, to reduce the noxious fumes breathed in by New Yorkers.

Dr. Leonard Greenberg said Chl, cago has 1,000 buses running on the propane fuel and there's no reason why New York should not try it out.

Commonwealth Orders Speed In Labor

THEY'LL DO IT EVERY TIME

By JIMMY HATLO

Funds for such work will come from a one-cent-per-pack tax on cigarettes. The tax was levied on a biennial basis by the legislature last year. It is a one-shot tax which is to be used—under the broadened interpretation given it by the Assembly later on—for reconstruction or rehabilitation of areas after disaster strikes.

Goddard said that because the cost of reservoirs or dams on creeks above the Stroudsburg would have been exorbitant, his department had decided on the system of dikes and levees which will be used. He placed the estimated cost of such reservoirs at about $11 million.

The Corps of Engineers had also analyzed the possibility of using dams locally and had arrived at the same conclusion—the cost was too high—independently. The Corps and the department are working closely together in studies now being made. Corps workers are making the test borings in the area and this is their responsibility alone, Goddard said.

Unit One

Unit number one in the proposed plan for localized flood control in this area will consist of levees on both banks of the Brodheads Creek, Goddard said. Both will have pumping stations, he said.

Other work considered part of the local project, he indicated, would be levee work along Michaels Creek, where it joins Brodheads, and the possibility of a concrete channel in Pocono Creek.

Corps of Engineers expect to complete borings as part of the tests for construction of dikes and levees "sometime this Fall," he said. After design phases for the local project are completed, the work would be cleared for possible construction kickoff within a year, he indicated.

Goddard praised highly the men who have worked in the local Department of Forests and Waters offices and who have been in direct charge of stream clearance in the Pocono area. He noted that "well over 100 miles of debris clearance" has been completed on such major streams as Brodheads, Michaels and the Pocono. Work in this phase is "essentially completed," he said.

When the Department is finished with area streams, he went on, "many of the channels will be far better than they were before 'Hurricane' Diane." He emphasized that the State "wants them to be better" because they will offer greater protection against possible floods after that.

The secretary noted that present efforts to find a site for a proposed Delaware River water resources—flood control and dam are concentrated on two locations—Tocks Island and Wallpack Bend. He said engineers favor Tocks Island because it affords "60 per cent greater storage capacity."

Asked if Tocks Island might not prove more economically feasible than Wallpack Bend, even if it did cost more money, Goddard replied that this was true.

He pointed out that such dams as those at Dyberry and Prompton had helped eliminate the need for costly lower-stream localized flood control projects.

One of the arguments advanced by proponents of Wallpack Bend as a site for the dam has been that it would be more feasible economically.

Church Takes Stand On Integration

LANCASTER, Pa., Sept. 4 (AP)—The ruling body of the Evangelical and Reformed Church today condemned any attempts to evade the Supreme Court integration decision "which would weaken or undermine the public schools."

In a unanimous vote without debate, 400 delegates to the 10th triennial session of the church's general synod approved the statement declaring:

"We cannot do otherwise than to work persistently to eliminate all forms of discrimination and to guarantee equal opportunity for education, employment and the enjoyment of civil rights to all citizens regardless of their racial, national or religious origin."

Report

A committee report on Christian social action noted that it would be "unwise to apply the same timetable rigidly to all communities in the nation" in enforcing integration.

Another report adopted by the delegates emphasized what they called an unfavorable balance of the time children spend in school, watching television and in obtaining religious instruction.

"Under the most ideal circumstances Protestant young people are subject to religious instruction perhaps once a week, seldom for longer than 30 minutes," said the Rev. Franklin I. Sheeter, Collegeville, Pa.

In contrast, he said, school age children spend 24 hours a week in public schools and watch television 26 hours a week.

"More than half of the young people in the United States have never had adequate religious instruction of any kind," he said.

"Our churchfolk need more help to use the media at their command to reach the people."

Commission Postpones Bell Request

HARRISBURG, Sept. 4 (AP)—The Public Utility Commission today suspended for three more months a 36 million dollar a year rate increase asked by the Bell Telephone Co. of Pennsylvania.

The new suspension will run until Dec. 14.

The commission ordered the further suspension because it said it could not complete all hearings into the case by the original Sept. 14 suspension-ending date.

The increase, largest ever proposed by a utility in the state, was originally filed to become effective last March 14, but the PUC delayed it for an investigation to determine whether it is justified.

Church Takes Stand On Integration

LANCASTER, Pa., Sept. 4 (AP)—The ruling body of the Evangelical and Reformed Church today condemned any attempts to evade the Supreme Court integration decision "which would weaken or undermine the public schools."

In a unanimous vote without debate, 400 delegates to the 10th triennial session of the church's general synod approved the statement declaring:

"We cannot do otherwise than to work persistently to eliminate all forms of discrimination and to guarantee equal opportunity for education, employment and the enjoyment of civil rights to all citizens regardless of their racial, national or religious origin."

Report

A committee report on Christian social action noted that it would be "unwise to apply the same timetable rigidly to all communities in the nation" in enforcing integration.

Another report adopted by the delegates emphasized what they called an unfavorable balance of the time children spend in school, watching television and in obtaining religious instruction.

Card Of Thanks

We wish to take this means of expressing our sincere thanks and appreciation for the sympathy and assistance rendered us by our many neighbors and friends in our bereavement in the loss of our wife and mother, Alice Fitch, who died Sept. 3, 1956. Her death was a great loss to our family and to the town of Stroudsburg. We were especially grateful to the Nurses and Doctors of the Monroe County General Hospital who took such excellent care of Mrs. Fitch during her long illness. Her funeral was held at the funeral home of Mr. Fitch, Richard & Jacqueline.

Groner Speaks To Teachers At Pre-School Conference

INTRODUCTION OF 13 new teachers and an address on "Unfinished Business of Education" highlighted a joint meeting of all faculty members of the Stroud Union School District at Stroudsburg High School yesterday morning.

The talk was given by Earl F. Groner, superintendent of schools.

The new teachers are: Howard Atwell, 10th grade English; Mrs. Florence Carson, junior high school history and English; Miss Louise Dunkelberger, kindergarten; Mrs. Marguerite Hawk, elementary; Ralph Harrison, vocal and instrumental music, elementary; Vernon Hontz, junior high school history and geography and assistant football coach.

Thomas Manley, elementary; Mrs. Rose Morgan, kindergarten; Mrs. Margaret Roscher, Mrs. Beatrice Raymond, Mrs. Marian Serfass, Mrs. Ruth Serfass and Mrs. Elva Thomas, all elementary.

Superintendent Groner praised the teachers for the work accomplished last year and introduced the school administrators. Brief talks were given by Alfred W. Munson, high school principal, and Roger A. Dunning, supervisor of elementary education.

Elementary
Dunning met late yesterday morning with the elementary teachers to map the program for the opening day of school. Munson held a similar meeting in the afternoon with the secondary teachers.

Groner's talk dealt with proper yardsticks for guidance, day to day behavior, community responsibility, special services, recreation and condition of the physical plant.

In discussing the matter of standards, he posed these questions for the teachers:
"How shall we teach our intellectual heavyweights to work at levels that will require and reward their best? How can we at the same time help less able pupils to compete under conditions that will stimulate them, without destroying their desire to stay in the game? And what of the great middle group, of whom there are more than all the exceptional children added together? How shall we use standards most thoughtfully with them to help each one become that special person he might be?"

Groner's reference to community responsibility concluded with this comment: "The elevation of taste, the increasing of understanding and the development of an informed sense of personal responsibility are very much the business of education. The character of this town as a generation hence, which will be the collective character of its citizens, will in all probability be more strongly influenced by what happens in our schools than by any other single factor subject to the control of the present generation of adults."

The superintendent said: "More is involved than academic instruction, for another of our unfinished jobs has to do with responsible moral and social behavior. This is far broader than the problem of delinquency, for it touches all our children and reaches well beyond the school into the fabric of society itself."

"In our desire to give young people freedom could we have overshoot our mark? Have we tried so hard to be permissive that we have denied children the very supports they need for healthy growth? Are there certain standards that children should learn to accept as morally mandatory? Can these standards be translated by all schools into terms of day-to-day behavior that are universally appropriate or must they vary with each child's cultural background?"

"These are not easy questions and the answers are not yet available but it is very clear that we must keep working at them, not only in home and church, but in the schools as well."

Earl F. Groner

Steels, Motors Rally On Stock Market

NEW YORK, Sept. 4 (AP)—A late rally by steels and motors kicked the stock market out of sluggish irregularity today and sent it ahead for a smart advance.

Pivotal issues advanced around three points or more. Those leading stocks which persisted on the downside kept their losses within a point or so.

The market was higher at the opening and it looked as if Wall Street would continue its unusual advance of Friday. But the pace slowed abruptly and within the first hour prices turned irregular.

Leadership
Aircrafts, however, retained throughout the session the leadership they showed at the start. Only about an hour and a quarter before the close did steels and motors pick up suddenly and pace an advance by a number of other groups.

Reports of still greater demand for steel products and the industry's latest weekly operating rate of 98.710 per cent boosted demand for steel shares. News of more labor trouble in northern Rhode Island copper mines bolstered copper prices.

Volume increased as prices rose late in the day, boosting the day's turnover to 1,790,000 shares compared with 1,620,000 on Friday.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks advanced $1.40 to $184.70 with the industrials up $2.90, the rails unchanged and the utilities up 30 cents.

The day's most active stock was U. S. Steel, up 2 1/4 at 67 1/4 on 34,800 shares. Second was Glenn L. Martin, up 1 1/4 at 39 1/4 on 33,800 shares. Third was Jones & Laughlin Steel, up 1 1/4 at 58 1/4 on 30,500 shares. Bethlehem Steel gained 3 1/4.

Juniata Selects Two Area Men

TWO AREA MEN have been named by Juniata College Alumni Association to an organization of 100 volunteer counselors who will assist the college in the screening of candidates for admission.

The two are Thomas H. Knepp, of Stroudsburg, a graduate of Juniata in 1931, and Dr. E. Ralph Brumbaugh, of Pen Argil, a member of the Class of 1924.

Common Practice

In setting up the alumni counselor group, the college explained that it is a common practice for students who are headed for the best colleges to apply to more than one institution. This multiple application procedure makes it difficult for the college to accept an exact number of applicants.

An interview by an interested alumnus will reveal the student's actual plans and college preference. Then, a report of this interview is passed on to the admissions office as a guide.
